

To : The State Board of Education Members,
Re: The History–Social Science Subject Matter Committee of the Instructional Quality
Commission Members

Regarding education to American young people is very important.
Comfort women issue is fundamentally political propaganda which claims that CW is mainly Korean young girls forced to be sex slaves.

The agenda is to cut American and Japanese Alliance to make both countries weaken for China to control America and Japan by " (Anti-Japan) Global Alliance for Preserving the History of WW II in Asia".

Moreover, historical facts are proven already by American war time documents and also in President Clinton era, America made report of IWG documents on CW and other so called Japanese atrocities which apologized to ( Anti-Japan ) Global Alliance for Preserving the History of WW II in Asia.

Here is historical facts Dr. Hata, the phenomenal historian pointed out 8 points to be corrected on on American text book company MagrowHill.

Hope you will understand what it is about misleading descriptions,
Please read the whole in link site. The following is just a part.

U.S. Textbook Publisher: We Won't Change Language on Comfort Women "Scholars Aligned Behind Historical Fact" Battle over History

http://19historians.com/u-s-textbook-publisher-we-wont-change-language-on-comfort-women-scholars-aligned-behind-historical-fact-battle-over-history/

Also there is an article about Korean comfort women based on Korean newspaper and Korean archives.

Three-point Suite : The facts about South Korea's comfort women, 1945-2015

[http://19historians.com/three-point-suite-the-facts-about-south-koreas-comfort-women-1945-
2015/](http://19historians.com/three-point-suite-the-facts-about-south-koreas-comfort-women-1945-2015/)

By historian Hata Ikuhiko

Hata Ikuhiko: Born in Yamaguchi Prefecture, 1932. Graduated from the Faculty of Law, Tokyo University. Doctor of Law. After studying at Harvard and Columbia Univ. Formerly director of the Office of Financial Affairs History, Ministry of Finance; visiting professor at Princeton University; professor at Chiba University; and professor at Nippon University. His many publications include In Pursuit of the Mysteries of Shōwa History (Bungei Shunjū), Comfort Women and Warzone Sex (Shinchō Sensho, 1999), HIROHITO the Shōwa Emperor in war and Peace (Global Oriental, 2007)

The day the taboo was broken

The editorial in the May 2nd, 2015, edition of the South Korean newspaper JoongAng Ilbo sounded the following alarm:

If South Korea takes a wrong turn, then it will find itself placed in a position of pariah vis-à-vis neighboring nations.

And the leftist Hankyoreh newspaper argued, in an editorial on May 6th, that, “incompetent South Korean diplomacy must be reformed in its entirety, both in terms of strategy and in terms of personnel.” South Korean President Park Geun-hye has previously maintained her hardline stance by publicly citing “one thousand years of resentment” in refusing to hold bilateral top-level talks with Japan as long as Japan did not resolve historical issues, including the comfort-woman problem. But, perhaps unable any longer to ignore these media criticisms of her administration, even President Park has begun to show signs of softening her position. But after announcing a “two-track strategy” for dealing with security and economic concerns separately from the historical issues, she immediately made an abrupt volte-face. A resolution was passed in the South Korean National Assembly on May 2nd condemning Japanese Prime Minister Abe Shinzō by name, and President Park, on May 20th, personally appealed to the secretary general of UNESCO, conveying her opposition to the tentatively-approved world heritage list registration of a Meiji-era Japanese industrial revolution site.

The nadir of this anti-Japan sentiment came perhaps on May 15th, when a columnist for the South Korean online media outlet Daily Journal remarked irresponsibly that, “given the opportunity, the only thing to be done would be to make Princess Kako of the Japanese imperial household work as a comfort woman.”

Public opinion within Japan regarding South Korea, which had already been tending toward resignedly letting South Korea alone to do as it pleased, seems to have accepted these latest outbursts and maneuverings with an indifferent attitude of, “here we go again.” Put in the most awkward position in all of this is probably the United States, which has been exerting every possible effort to build bridges between Japan and South Korea in an attempt to bring a rebalancing to East Asia as part of the strengthening of the South Korea-Japan-US alliance.

All this notwithstanding, there is something I have come to realize in the course of pondering how best to understand this heightened anti-Japan sentiment—a sentiment that seems somehow different from the usual fare.

Namely, while Japan and the United States, and South Korea and the United States, all seem somehow to functionally communicate through the medium of English, there are very few people in either Japan or South Korea who speak one another’s respective language. Thus, news networks and major newspapers, as well as news agencies and special correspondents, pick up only secondary information, leaving no spaces for multi-layered intellectual exchange.

Symbolic of this regrettable state of affairs is that, while the three major South Korean newspapers (the Chosun Ilbo, the Dong-A Ilbo, and the JoongAng Ilbo) all publish Japanese editions, the newspaper reading room at the National Diet Library—which carries all of the major newspapers from Europe and North America—does not carry any of the Japanese versions of the South Korean papers.

( skipped )

122 American-military comfort women

On June 25th, 2014, one hundred and twenty-two former American-military comfort women filed suit against the South Korean government, seeking apologies and reparations for alleged forced abduction and forced prostitution. The brief included documents signed by former South Korean President Park Chung-hee showing that these activities were carried out under his direct jurisdiction.

When, in 1992, as the first Japanese-military comfort woman Kim Hak-sun and others filed suit with the Tokyo District Court, the number of plaintiffs was only three (later, six). Lawsuits filed thereafter have also included only a few plaintiffs, making the plaintiff group of one hundred and twenty-two women of a scale without parallel elsewhere.

Although this would seem to be tremendously newsworthy, none of the three major South Korean newspapers ran even a single line about the lawsuit, despite there having been a press conference by the related parties. This remains virtually unchanged. As there is no evidence of the South Korean government's having ordered any reporting restrictions, the only plausible explanation is a tacit decision to practice voluntary restraint.

(skipped the rest)

PLEASE READ the rest from the link.

So the question is: what is good to teach Chinese and Korean propaganda to American young people ? ? ? It is the Communist's propaganda to make the US and Japan weaken to take over.

If you want to teach them the sex slave propaganda to the students, how do you explain the news that Korean/Chinese sex massage parlors have been raided by police, none of Japanese???

I do hope America is not controlled by Global Alliance for Preserving the History of WWW II in Asia.

The main conference is held in Beijing and the members are Communist Chinese and also Chiang Kai sheik descendants who massacred Taiwanese elite people after they fled from mainland defeated by Mao Communist Army to Taiwan led by American government.

To make peace, we must become wise, not to be deceived by Communist Propaganda.

As you know, neutral nation, Switzerland has been teaching people what is real enemy to take over the country: Communists. They also teach how communist disguise using beautiful words. Hope you make right decision for America and American young people. not for Chinese Communists.

Sincerely yours,

Masae Kaizuka